INT. HOUSE - DAY

Clarke faces off with the formidable Anya. Clarke hesitates, not sure how to begin. They didn't teach negotiation with invaders in school.

CLARKE

I think... we got off to a rough start, your people and mine. But we want to find a way to live together.

ANYA

I understand. You started a war that you don't know how to end.

Clarke is thrown. They started a war?

CLARKE

What? We didn't start anything. You've attacked us for no reason. You've killed--

ANYA

(interrupting, angry)
For no reason? The missiles you launched burned a village to the ground.

CLARKE

The Clarks? No, those were a signal, meant for our families. We had no idea that--

ANYA

You've repeatedly invaded our territory. When you arrived in your ship, and again when you crossed the river--

CLARKE

We didn't know how to cross the river. And we didn't choose to come here at all.

ANYA

But you chose to send an armed raiding party to capture one of us. You chose to torture him.

Quietly, Clarke glances to Lincoln. This conversation isn't one she can deny.
